Five Things to Know about Finance

1. The Amazon punchout tile is available and now is a great time to get familiar with the preferred Amazon purchasing method. The punchout should be used for all local deliveries, while T&E Card use should be restricted only for shipments to non-local addresses. Here are resources on how to make the switch.

2. Final Utility Rates for FY2026 have been posted on the Facilities Management website.

3. This summer, UBI is being streamlined: The Business Intelligence Team will be working with users to make sure users' reporting needs are met.

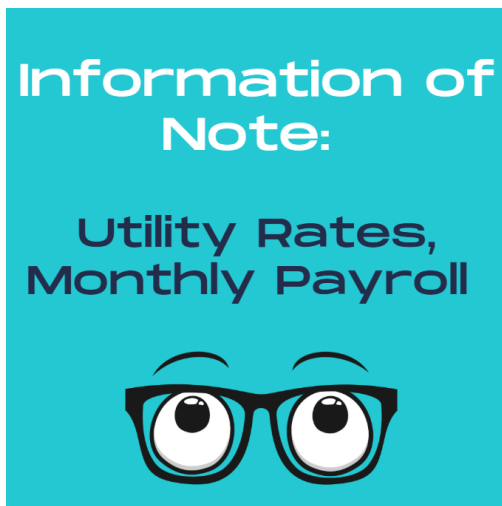

4. Workday Roles are tied to positions, not people. System access doesn't follow a person when they change positions, even in the same department.

5. We're Moving to Paymode for e-payments. Bank of America is contacting our suppliers to help them identify the best electronic payment option for them.
